Programme Highlight

With a population of over 7 million people and a rapidly growing economy, Hong Kong is generating a significant amount of electronic waste, including batteries. Batteries contain valuable metals like nickel, iron, and cobalt, which can be used for a variety of materials such as magnet alloy and stainless steel.

The disposal of batteries in landfills can cause serious environmental and health problems. Inappropriate handling of batteries might lead to the leakage of such chemicals in soil and water, which is harmful to humans and nature.

Battery recycling has several benefits, it reduces the number of batteries sent to landfills, conserves natural resources, and prevents the release of harmful chemicals into the environment. Recycling also promotes the circular economy by creating a new supply of materials for the production of new batteries and other products.

Vannex, a local recycling firm, provides a whole range of collection, recycling & waste management solution in waste electronic and electric equipment, batteries, plastics and waste paper to promote resource circulation and sustainable development.
